

Fiscal year 21-22 saw the Art Center return closer to a regular slate of activities, following two fiscal years that were impacted directly by the COVID-19 pandemic. Indoor group activities returned, including classes, receptions, and talks. And the annual outdoor art festival ArtSplash returned in an exciting new way. The second half of the fiscal year included a whirlwind of major events that brought attendance levels back to normal and beyond.

The fiscal year began with the return of summer art camp, the beginning of a series of exhibitions focusing on Iowa artists, and ArtSplash. The summer camp classes were capped at ten students so that social distancing and other safety protocols could be enforced. Attendance was robust with most of the five two-camps operating at capacity. Sioux City artists Dolie Thompson and Al Harris-Fernandez, as well as Des Moines artist Molly Wood, were the subjects of one-person exhibitions that opened August through November 2021. And, after its cancellation in 2020, ArtSplash returned with many outstanding changes. The festival was held on the Art Center grounds and facilities, and spilled out onto 3rd Street. Though the number of participating artists was significantly smaller than in past years, the new location, the uses of the Art Center building and the Gilchrist Learning Center, and the elimination of an admission fee brought a new level of excitement for the festival, attracting nearly 11,000 visitors during Labor Day weekend.

The Art Center organized a number of major events during the second half of the fiscal year. On March 1, 2022, the Art Center celebrated 25 years of operation in its building with a Mardi Gras-themed party. During the event, the contents of the time capsule from the late 1990s were removed and presented. A few weeks later, a family program allowed visitors to create double self-portraits of themselves now and how they imagine they will look in 25 years. These and other materials were placed back into the time capsule, to be reopened in 2047. One month later, the Art Center hosted ARTcetera, its triennial art auction, that featured nearly 100 artworks displayed throughout the first floor, nearly double the number of artworks included in previous auctions. And one month after that, on May 7, the Art Center opened its largest exhibition of the year, Towers of Tomorrow with LEGO® Bricks. Occupying the third-floor Main Gallery and first-floor atrium, this massive, internationally touring exhibition was free to the public and included hands-on activities, three free workshops for children, and presentations by architects and engineers.

For fiscal year 22-23, the Art Center is working on exhibitions and programs designed to broaden its appeal throughout the community and to bring unique perspectives to major issues. With the leadership provided by the City of Sioux City in combination with the support of many individuals, businesses, and foundations, the Sioux City Art Center looks forward to continuing its service to Sioux City.

Thank you for your support.

Director, Sioux City Art Center
